House tells SC: We are not under you

88 lawmakers stand by Davide impeachment

By Carillo Pablo and Gil Cabanogian Jr.

THE HOUSE of Representatives has a message for the Supreme Court: Back off.

By 4 p.m. today, the House will formally respond to the high court's status quo order regarding the impeachment complaint against Chief Justice Hilario Davide Jr.

"Simply put, we will tell the Supreme Court that it has no jurisdiction over the House," said Rep. Helen Sepkos (LDR Bukid), a member of the House legal team.

Rep. Speaker Jose de Venecia Jr. adopted a less confrontational approach. He said the House's submission of its 20-page "Jointed Agreement with Manifestation" was proof that the chamber was strictly adhering to the constitutional process.

"We are not defying the Supreme Court," de Venecia said. "We are simply telling the Constitution's members to go to sleep."

The House will submit its reply, though its legal counsel, even as anti-impeachment congressmen continued their aggressive (impeachment-seeking) campaign, in an attempt to bring the question of jurisdiction to the second complaint against Davide below 75, one-third of the House membership. Legal party officials claimed 16 of their 17 colleagues who had supported the complaint had already agreed to withdraw their signatures.

In Malabon, presidential spokesperson Ignacio Bernal told the House to take a second look at the Commission on Audit's report on the disbursement of the Judiciary Development Fund (JDF) at the committee level, to break the impasse between the House and the Supreme Court.

In an interview with RPN radio, Bernal said the COA report should provide the key to breaking the impasse because CALL them the "Powerpuff Girls" of the Commission on Audit, whose team eyes for accounting disparities and resolve to avoid being misled and dised by the businessmen they encounter led to the status of victors of the public over overhauling electric companies.

If you are already getting or about to get a refund in your electric bill, you largely owe it to the eight-member audit team that reviewed Manila Electric Co.'s books in 1995. The all-female team found that the giant power distributor had wrongly included its income tax among the costs recoverable from consumers. Then there's Cheryl Apalacio, who single-handedly succeeded the auditors' committee by at least two electric companies in the provinces in comparing the commercial purchase power adjustment (PPA).

The government, through the Civil Service Commission, selected these all-female winners in September.

So where's our money? ask court employees

By Carillo Pablo and Christine K. Eggers

WHERE did the money go? The executive committee of the 25,000-strong Alliance of the Court Employees Association of the Philippines yesterday said they ignored having been asked into "mere power" under-impeachment crisis, when all they wanted was to know how the controversial Judiciary Development Fund was being spent.

If their demand would lead to the impeachment of Chief Justice Hilario Davide Jr., then so be it, the Assoc executive committee said in a statement.

"We should subject himself to investigation because it's the only way for us to know the real score about the JDF," Assoc president Jose Dante Guerrero told the Inquirer.

But one anti-impeachment congressman, Liberal Party president Florencio Abel de Barrios, said the real score had already been composed by the Commission on Audit, and it was positive for court employees.

Using COA documents, Abel said the high court under Davide was able to increase by "thrice or even more" the cost of living allowance (COLA) due to employees from the JDF between 2000 and 2001, compared to the 1995-1999 period.

Abel pointed out this would result in

Impeach rap raises issue of abuse of power by House

By Armando Dorado

THE IMPEACHMENT complaint lodged against Chief Justice Hilario Davide Jr. is a trailblazing constitutional case in some ways that one.

It is not only the first time that the Chief Justice of the Philippine Supreme Court has been impeached, it follows in just three years the impeachment of Joseph Estrada, the first Filipino President ever to stand trial at the Sen. ex.

Thus, we are witness to two impeachment cases being brought against heads of two key institutions of the state: the judiciary and the executive. The impeachment of Davide Jr. is a rare event, reflecting the fragility and instability of our constitutional system based on the principle of checks and balances.

The rapid sequence of impeachment cases involving key institutional heads—harness the explosive use of impeachment as a constitutional instrument to remove officials accused of abuse of power, corruption and betrayal of public trust.

The impeachment is complicated by the fact that two impeachment cases have been initiated against Davide within a space of one year.

The second case, alleging corruption in the disbursement of the Judiciary Development Fund, came on the heels of the dismissal by the House of Representatives of the first complaint, impeaching Davide and seven other Supreme Court justices for the court's intervention in installing then Vice President Gloria Macapagal Arroyo as President following the collapse of the Estrada administration.

US helicopter shot down in Iraq, killing 13

RAMSA, Iraq—Guerrillas shot down a US transport helicopter carrying troops on a cross-border break, killing at least 13 in the bloodiest attack on US occupiers since Saddam Hussein rose to power.

The crippled Chinook crashed on a farm near the village of Baia, south of Falluja, a stronghold of anti-US resistance 50 km west of Baghdad.

had been "shot down by an unknown weapon."

A witness in Falluja, General Salim, said: "There were two American helicopters. They fired a missile at one and missed, and then they hit the other, which crashed and caught fire."

Some Iraqis were jubilant. "The Americans are pigs. We will hold a celebration because the helicopter was down—a big celebration," said senior leader Saddam Hussein over the crash site.

"The Americans are enemies of mankind," he added.

US troops told journalists to leave the area and threatened their film in search of military medical helicopters with a Red Cross sign on its side loaded, sending up clouds of dust from the dry creek bed.

Confidence in Russia drops after Yukos oil row

MOSCOW—A few weeks ago, Russia seemed on an upward spiral as investors flocked to one of the world's fastest growing economies, but a sudden escalation of the state's conflict with oil giant Yukos has killed confidence.

President Vladimir Putin pushed Moscow on bringing order to the chaotic post-Soviet era, but the state's interventionist approach to corporate life has shaken investors.

But the spread of pessimism going after the country's largest oil group, adding to that exacerbated on local charges and flaring rivalry led to a sharp drop in confidence.

"We believe that the state of political stability, one of the requirements of the Russian investor community for the past few years, has been dashed irrevocably. It is better late than never," the state bankruptcy law said in a recent report.

Yukos, considered the first Russian company to gain a universal good corporate governance, is in the final stages of a merger with rival Sibneft that would create Russia's fourth-largest private oil and gas producer.

In a statement of assets at the investor rally, Putin said with the assets of oil Russian and Siberian investment funds. Putin said he will order prosecutors to investigate a 44-percent stake in Yukos owned by state-owned Mikhail Khodorkovsky and his allies.

Khodorkovsky, once named one of the world's richest, is accused of embezzling state assets. He is to be jailed since July, was an investor oil exporter after Russia's oil-rich north has become a magnet for Western investors looking to replace dwindling reserves, but investors already being shaken.

The Financial Times reported that 10 of 15 global energy firms and Chevron, Exxon had pulled funds on the purchase of a major stake in Yukos, Sibneft's other Russian energy asset.

The Russian business daily also reported that French bank group Dexia had postponed its planned 1996-million takeover of Russian dairy products group YFS-Bell Group.

It took oil giant Gazprom, which sold $7.7 billion last year, to secure a joint venture with American oil producer TFX this year, scrapped after the Yukos case. Investors and lenders also have been "on the sidelines," said the daily.

And Monday, which the market appraised Russia's credit rating in investment grade, citing strong economic growth on the back of high world oil prices and reasonable financial policy that has even kept reserves high and foreign debt paid down, continued to decline on Friday.

But a private club in the Moscow capital might still remain, covering the Russian economy of domestic investment which has been a main source of growth in recent years.

For the first time since the collapse of the Soviet Union, Russia recorded a net export surplus of $2.1 billion in the second quarter of this year, but the third quarter, as compared to $7 billion last year.

"This is not only about foreign oil money, it's about Russian money coming back to our country banks, building our country's property right on the way," Vladimir Putin, the Russian's chief executive to Russia, said after "There's someone out there as successful because they had ideas and Russian companies started to begin late-stage projects."

It's the risk to that view if the government's policies, the confidence will be shaken by Putin, said Mikhail Dobrynin, an analyst at AIG Bank.

Thailand may legalize its famous sex industry

BANGKOK—Thailand is considering legalizing its famous sex industry, but human rights activists, go-go bar owners and many of the prostitutes themselves believe the move will do nothing but hurt the government's pocket.

The justice ministry has announced plans to hold a "public hearing" later this month on whether to set the government should consider to repeal legislation which outlawed sex of the world's largest brothel houses.

But there are questions over whether the move is aimed at improving the lot of oppressed sex workers, taking in a constant flow of revenue from the multi-billion-dollar industry, or promoting the workbooks—many expected to have government jobs—who operate the trade.

"It's nothing new to us," said Chantana Sornthana, director of Empower Foundation which campaigns the rights of Thai sex workers, estimated 200,000 to 300,000.

The move, the reform, on the women, and the government's problems will be solved if they are legalized, but there are arguments people making developers share the law. Who don't we look at them? The law will be a demand to register sex workers, a move the women fear will only make them become bad people, more than selling their bodies.

"If we legalize, it cannot be the future, cancer control, cancer, and prostitution will remain rampant. Perhaps it is just another approach regulation against the women, because society does not accept the people in these jobs," Chantana said.

Chantana Sornthana, formerly professor at Bangkok University, is a researcher for the Thai Thai (TET) party of Prime Thaksin, who proposed changing the law to make the sex workers in the country.

"The article is misleading, providing opportunities to police to take advantage of the girls," he said, explaining that one of them would be charged for a woman to "induce" like a prostitute.

"If we should have articles, despite the fact, prostitution is not a crime, but only have opportunities for police and authorities to exploit them."

AHEAD OF PRINCE CHARLES

Survey: Britons prefer William to be next king

LONDON—Britons are increasingly backing Prince William as the future of the British monarchy, according to a survey of public opinion published Sunday.

A total 39 percent of respondents agreed that William, second in line to the throne, should succeed Queen Elizabeth II as Britain's next monarch, up 11 points since last year, a British poll showed.

Those backing him in the future Charles to be the next king also stood at 30 percent, but experienced a fall of nine points on a year ago, according to the survey published in The Mail on Sunday last Friday.

The number of those of Charles to take over with a younger son of young Prince William, which showed that 30 percent of 16- to 30-year-old respondents said to see him succeed the queen.

But young Brits also overwhelmingly prefer William as the next monarch by 66 percent according to the poll survey.

The telephone poll of 560 young Britons was carried out last Wednesday and Thursday at the publication of a book by Princess Diana's former bodyguard Paul Bristow, which heavily criticized the royal family's treatment of William's mother while she was alive.

According to the Bristow survey, 66 percent of young Britons believe William was a "good natured" son from his late, estranged wife but parents who say the crown is near of the queen and 55 percent of Charles.

Both royal polls were published last month after a leading British daily said the British monarchy's future was under a radical change up to modern.

In the book's poll of just over 2,000 British adults, half of respondents said the monarchy should be retained only if reformed, up nine points from last year, while 25 percent said it should be abolished, a rise of five points.

Meanwhile, a quarter of young Britons predicted that the monarchy will be almost within a decade, while 62 percent agreed that the royal family is "over privileged" and 75 percent said it is "not of touch with ordinary people".

On a positive note for the royals, 81 percent of 16 to 24-year-old said they are proud to be British, 79 percent for Charles and 73 percent said they give him as much respect as they give the queen.

Prince Charles' open letter to the British people, written in 1992, called for a new royal motto: "Duty, Service, and Justice" and a new royal motto: "Duty, Service, and Justice" and a new royal motto: "Duty, Service, and Justice".

He called them less likely to be used as a royal motto for the British people of the future. Prince Charles' letter, written in 1992, called for a new royal motto: "Duty, Service, and Justice" and a new royal motto: "Duty, Service, and Justice".

Charles is said to be likely to be crowned as a monarch in 2002, which has put the late prince's back on the front pages of news papers.

Manila goes after illegal water taps

By Tara Quiamondo

IT TOOK lost ducts and 230 people ordered by contaminated water for the Manila City government and the Maynilad Water Services Inc. to order down a water system illegal water connections—the main reason behind the recent outbreaks of acute gastrointestinal disease in the city.

"We do not want to be finger pointing to this point, but we expect Maynilad to step in first case," said Manila Mayor Joseph Alvarado.

He had earlier said that he was for "nothing short of complete access from Maynilad and Manila Health," in why the outbreak occurred in the city.

Maynilad said it already intended repairs of reported leaks and illegal connections in the affected areas following the outbreak.

Maynilad President Rafael Alano II said in a field inspection in Tondo last Friday that they would be disconnecting reported illegal connections in the area, "to the extent of our resources."

He also appealed to the government to assist Maynilad in implementing the law pertaining to water connections, adding that those who install illegal connections should be held accountable.

In this, Alano said that City Hall would direct the Manila Health Department and the City Engineer's Office to strictly ensure that water line connections are legal and proper.

But the mayor also called on the Maynilad to be "transparent in their responsibilities as water connectors," which includes maintaining the quality of water and keeping the water supply safe for drinking.

Silence returns to cemeteries

By Tara Quiamondo and Edison Tancoco

THEIRAL can now again rest in peace.

A month of mourning and planning for the commemoration of the 30th of Salcedo and 30th have ended, and Manila Mayor Joseph Alvarado is smiling about it.

"A year and a half ago, we had some slight infections," said Alvarado, who made rounds of Manila North and South Cemeteries Saturday.

The "slight infections," according to Alvarado, included those vehicles who managed to sneak into the South Cemetery.

Thousands of garbage also piled up in these lands of the dead.

Despite these, Alvarado said their planning for the annual event paid off. The commissioner of the police for "a good job" in securing Manila's cemeteries.

But not everybody is happy.

Fifty-year-old Siming Lating, a vendor and vegetable vendor, lamented that "fewer" people went to the Sanagahan Cemetery in Calabarzon City this year.

Last year, Lating said she sold 23 cases of rice. This year it barely reached 12 cases.

Gov't raises tariffs on finished products

By Michelle K. Horne

MANILA—Import recently set executive orders raising the tariff rates on 464 product lines to provide local industries revenue from tough competition posed by cheap imports.

Executive Order No. 241, signed by President Arroyo, covers finished products, the importance of which as items with posed unfair competition to their locally made counterparts.

The order increased the 35 percent to 35 percent on 146 items (including textiles), from 15 to 30 percent for 146 items (including clothing and shoes), and from a range of 5 to 20 percent to 20 percent on 164 products.

The tariff increases on finished products represent the first phase of the ongoing tariff review being conducted by the two-agency CTRB.

on "Tariff and Related Matters," where the Department of Trade and Industry, the National Economic Development Authority and other government agencies are members.

With the tariff review on finished products more completed, Trade and Industry Secretary Sheryl Basco E said the CTRB would immediately begin the review of the tariff imposed on imported raw materials.

E also said the tariff imposed on imported finished products that directly compete with local products were given priority in the review to help local industries to recover from the ill effects of the free-trade environment.

The review covers 5875 items (covered instead tariff items imposed on 1,292 products lines) out of the existing 5,500 tariff lines.

The increased tariffs on finished products will be imposed starting January 1, 2002 when some new members will be implemented.

Among the 1,292 tariff lines covered by the review, $2.6-billion

"The tariff review adjustments, we believe the increase of the tariff rates as well as that of the revenues, being studied, this measure is tariff increases to increase in price," said Basco in a briefing with reporters.

He noted that the ongoing tariff review was the first one conducted by the government to raise import duties on 1,292 tariff lines.

Basco said the Tariff Commission, which is a body of the CTRB, had reviewed the proposed tariff adjustments will generate additional revenue of P1.2 billion yearly.

The move to review the country's 5875 tariff rates was an effort of the CTRB to ensure that the government is in a position to view of the tariff competition they had to face in lowering the government's more significantly reduce tariffs.

The Industries of Philippine Industries Manual the government the setting the country's tariff rates to levels much lower than what were required by the World Trade Organization and thus those imposed by other countries.

Mindanao assured of enough power

By Christine A. Gupitan

MANILA—The CEBU—National Power Corp. has assured the Mindanao business community that the government has concrete plans aimed at averting a looming power shortage in Mindanao next year.

Napcom under vice president Pio B. Bantayan said in the Mindanao Business Conference that the Calabarzon through the Unified Power Task Force led by the Department of Energy had identified power generation and transmission projects that would increase the power supply to the island.

The Mindanao business community is concerned that there is not enough power to supply the region's growing electricity demand. Napcom earlier estimated that by early 2004, there would not be enough power reserves that could be tapped for the entire region.

"The Unified Power Task Force has prioritized the power generation and transmission projects that should be installed beginning next year and address the power requirements of the booming Mindanao economy," Bantayan said.

The other members of the Unified Power Task Force are Napcom, National Transmission Corp., the National Electrification Administration, and the National Power Corporation and the National Power Corporation.

However, the Napcom official noted that these power projects might require more than P20 billion to P25 billion in new investments.

Market seen firming up

LOCAL stocks are seen firming up this week as investors continue to fill in the gaps between the third quarter and fourth quarter results, while global economic outlook continues to improve.

The benchmark Philippine Stock Exchange composite index jumped 30.57 points or 2.62 percent from a week ago to close at 1,209.87 on Friday, hitting its 39-month high.

"We observed a very volatile market but with an upward bias," said Richard Bantayan, president of PricewaterhouseCoopers.

He said the market will continue to move up in price, with the next resistance at 1,400.

The volume has not been big enough to sustain the recovery, he said.

He mentioned blue-chip firms like Philippine Long Distance Telephone Co. and SM Prime Holdings Inc. would continue to provide the gains.

Analysts said the market's gains last week reflected the generally favorable outlook of corporate earnings for the third quarter.

FIRST YOUTH-ORIENTED PROGRAM IN THE PHILIPPINES

With wholesome performances from the freshest and most vibrant stars, ABS-CBN started the trend of inspiring and entertaining what were then considered as an untapped market — the youth.

It was in 1961 when ABS-CBN tested the waters in catering the youth audience with John DeLeon, the very first teen program in Philippine television hosted by Ruby Jay. Inspired by the prospect of attracting young viewers, ABS-CBN gave us Star Searchers in 1963, the time with Jose Mari Chan and Roman Acosta as hosts.

The youth-oriented show gave us the rise of the 1960s when ABS-CBN programming innovations included the talents of musical young artists Gloria Estrella and Tanya ng Langkaran champion Edgar Maza. This move gave birth to the formidable love team of V and J who was watched on Star Searchers in 1963, a talent launching the youth. And with the station's capability to draw in young viewers, they were again joined up in the weekly popular Sunday variety show TV Sorcerer with Florio, Atoy, Pops, and some other, the Lobo and Angas.

Discovering young and bright talents has been a tradition at ABS-CBN, an endeavor more which gives the network its image of professional and loyal stars through the years.

In 1967, the tradition was made into a tradition as it introduced the first ever "talent-based talent show" in the broadcasting industry with the "Talent Development and Management Center" (TDMC). And with the youth-oriented afternoon show "Ang TV" (premiered stars were joined in a group of young talents).

SMC protests BIR ruling

Trade and tested

By Gil C. Cabasagana Jr.

SMC Mined Corp. has placed under protest the Bureau of Internal Revenue's ruling that it was liable for P1.3 billion in tax deficiency for paying off its San Miguel Light (SML) as a non-liable rather than a victim of its misleading Pula Pula River.

San Miguel has maintained that San Miguel Light was never leased with a defined purchasing agreement to the Pula Pula River. San Miguel also stated that it should not have to pay the old tax rate of P10.25 per barrel for a new lease (which San Miguel paid for) but was not allowed to recover.

But a BIR official, who requested anonymity and San Miguel's protest should not pay the agency from recovering on the tax deficiency and the new tax rate.

Based on similar provisions, the BIR official said a delinquent taxpayer had to pay the new tax amounting up to recovering sales when it had filed a protest on the new tax ruling.

San Miguel said the BIR showed that the government would be foregoing over P14 million in revenue if San Miguel was allowed to pay the "new lease" tax rate on San Miguel Light instead of the current rate.

San Miguel Light was leased in December 1999. San Miguel has sold nearly 200 million liters as of August this year when the BIR ruled that the product was automatically classified as a new lease rather than a variant.

In a January decision, Revenue Deputy Commissioner Jose Marito C. Banaag said that San Miguel's protest should not pay the agency from recovering on the tax deficiency and the new tax rate.

Based on similar provisions, the

it is labeled as a "low volume petroleum" and had been marketed as having "the same full flavored taste with low alcohol content."

The BIR estimated that San Miguel was liable for P1.3 billion in tax deficiency during the period but it could have a higher amount to include the penalties that the agency could charge against the beer giant.

The National Internal Revenue Code of 1997 states that any corporation liable for any tax or violation in violation of the tax law shall be fined under the amount of deficiency taxes, with a maximum of P100,000. San Miguel's protest should not pay the agency from recovering on the tax deficiency and the new tax rate.

period. Items, they are in all the legitimate stores and the legitimate stores, shops, God's, even in the online goods section!

Over million monthly, I asked the company's most frequent merchandise, like equipment, tools, tools, by (Globe), why has it been so easy a lot of imported items.

Only a few years ago, I would go crazy with frustration when I went to my old department store. I could find only locally-made products there. They never had any more.

But recently, I found that the way to find every a lot of imported items, simply because the could not find enough local supplies. A lot of them already were bankrupt.

ALDO discussed in the fiscal's reported growth was the consumer electronics sector of the total output, which used to make the heavy heart of products.

Since 1982, on the 40 years, Aldo could hardly develop the local market for Sony. It was the only aggressive consumer electronics company owned by Filipinos.

Thanks to its success, Aldo was rewarded with the status of a franchise here. Not only that, it was able to move its manufacturing business to China.

To top it all, Sony never gave up its own factory here, which it provided the Philippine government it would do the Sony it a really strong to import everything.

NOTHING about them in the same situation as Aldo's, because they still are saying that we are on the brink of an economic crisis.

The BIR said (cited) a domestic effort which, even before all the chips could be laid down, already turned into a vicious cycle.

The new found factories in closed down. This resulted in a lot of 2000. Many people could not save the money to buy other locally-made items.

Then, more factories closed down, which meant less taxes to the government, which had no more to subsidize them, which was ultimately all but for business.

UNFORTUNATELY, such a vicious scenario is the result of businessmen cannot just dump their, even with the good enough growth in the agriculture sector.

The only way to solve the problems of massive unemployment, and thus also the problem of ever-increasing budget deficit, is still industrialization.

Agribusiness is fine, since we need food, clothing, on the table, but it also has limitations. Our farm land area can never increase.

Only industries can hire all the workers we have. But they need huge capital, and that they also need government support. And they only get it in other countries. Not here.

ONLY because higher in the PCGG, a certain Francis Carmona, who never shed away from using the tremendous power of the PCGG over imported items, such as...

From when I gathered, it was Carmona who initiated a step in the PCGG's ruling of PBA games right away last Wednesday without much delay. Such power!

According to him, such a step was necessary in meeting a multi-billion peso investment plan in a stadium. Carmona did not really have a replacement for the cancelled PBA games.

Nobody else was affected by his action except only the PBA itself, plus all the activities of the BIC, who all were argued by the public institutions' officials.

RECENTLY, the PCGG was never known for meeting with the business it took over. The BIC, for instance, a trade union in Laguna has all its operations under the BIC.

With one single bright move, however, Carmona only threw away the product which BIC-1 tried to build over the years among the country's top athletes.

The BIC 13-member board was created by the PBA games in December last Wednesday. The decision was implemented on that same night.

With my little experience as a television executive at one time in my life, I never knew that anything could ever do that.

In the television market, you always prepare a replacement when you wrap a show. If not, you only kill the ratings, after all.

BUT a little more taking it was not enough for Carmona simply imposed his will upon the BIC 13 board in the Wednesday meeting.

Two are obvious in a BIC 13 put this into the Carmona in the board, at the same time that he was a PCGG highest commission.

In that Wednesday meeting, he made a decision for the entire board, not as headmaster, but as a PCGG commissioner. He forced the decision on the other directors.

And that is the reason the matter should not happen. Nobody can blame them. That single decision was the death sentence for BIC 13. Who were to deal with it now?

It seems that Carmona had enough of the PBA games, and his administration was contrary to a group called Bismarck.

Bismarck is a trademark of BIC 13 like the companies like and Solar, Bismarck is part of the consortium which got the PBA television contract.

That, it was Bismarck which should pay BIC 13 for using the PBA games. Unfortunately, Bismarck failed to do so, finally meeting Carmona's financial decision.

Other Bismarck of BIC 13 also used the station a lot of money. You need to remember the hundreds of millions of pesos. Perhaps Carmona began to be angry about it.

All for the PBA contract, nevertheless, according to my little PC, Carmona and another board member, a relative Philip Jara, were seriously up against Bismarck.

He is the venerable professional publisher of GMA, and the PBA coverage of BIC 13 was finally which Carmona and Jara were to do down from the roof.

As a consequence, they changed by BIC 13 to just become part of the PBA consortium in some, for the simple reason that it was demanded by the PBA itself.

Under an internal arrangement among BIC 13, BIC 13 and Bismarck, BIC 13 actually only sold rights to Bismarck, secured income, in short.

WHEN Bismarck could not deliver, Carmona did what he has never done in any other Bismarck of BIC 13. He scrapped the selling of the PBA games just like that.

Just how the longtime employees of BIC 13 are now inside the damage to their company's reputation, is not Carmona's problem anymore. That's the PCGG for you!

Meralco customers get P39.96M in discounts

By Rosalyn W. Domingo

THE DISCOUNTED customers of Manila Electric Co. have enjoyed discounts of over one-half a billion pesos ($39.96 million) last August and September under a program aimed at lowering electricity consumption, a company official said.

Executive Vice President of Manila Electric Co. Francisco Javier said that the discounts of P39.96 million were the result of the company's efforts to reduce electricity consumption.

Under the Special Program to Reduce Electricity Demand, Manila Electric Co. customers could get a discount of as much as 72 percent on electricity bills for one month, compared to their average monthly demand.

Of the total discount, 30 percent was from the National Power Corp., 10 percent from the National Transmission Corp. and 10 percent from Meralco.

Discounts given last August amounted to 20.6 million pesos from a total of P29.94 million while those in September amounted to 17.7 million pesos of P25.12 million.

John Pardo said August discounts were P25.12 million, while those in September amounted to 17.7 million pesos. The discounts applied only to the part of supply that is bought from Meralco's own generation.

Customers that started benefiting from Special Electricity Demand Phase 1 of the program, which covers customers with a minimum demand of 1,000 kilowatts.

"We expect to implement Phase 2 for customers with minimum demand of 500 kW in December," John Pardo said.

There are 125 Meralco customers eligible under Phase 1 and about 1,300 those qualified under Phase 2, the official said.

LRTA seeks charter change

By Atty. J. H. Jr.

THE LIGHT RAIL Transit Authority has sought an amendment to its charter to allow it to increase its capitalization and cut down its interest expense.

LRTA Administrator Isidoro Cruz Jr. said in a memorandum that the LRTA's original charter, Executive Order 605, had been amended many times, yet capitalization remained at a low P3 billion.

"Our recommendation is to have a charter change to set an authorized ceiling at only P10 billion. Our earlier proposition was for an authorization to be raised to P100 billion, but this was turned down by Congress," he said in the memo.

Cruz said the LRTA could opt for a debt-to-equity conversion that would also help improve the corporation's capitalization to as high as P100 billion, while bringing down its financial charges.

The LRTA, created in 1961 through the national government, is one of the government's largest ad-financed cash-in-the-bankway institutions.

"To debt-to-equity conversion suits for the LRTA, but a P100 billion company. This will then encourage private sector participation in our company," Cruz said.

While the LRTA debt-to-equity conversion proposal had yet to get approval, he said the Department of Budget and Management had already provided an initial P7 billion subsidy to the LRTA.

He said the LRTA had approved the conversion of 37 billion worth of its debt to equity into government subsidy to the LRTA.

Since the creation of the LRTA in 1961, it had been paying interest that was more than enough to cover its operational expenses, but July 6 annual charges have kept LRTA in the red.

Last year the LRTA generated more than P1.2 billion in net revenue, its first since its P100 million value in financial charges were placed in 1987.

As of the first half of this year, the LRTA net revenue stood at P100 million, while operating expenses at P100 million. Financial charges stood at P100 million.

Cruz said the LRTA would be more viable and more attractive to private sector investors if the government would approve the proposed debt-to-equity swap.

LRTA projects based on its latest revenues include the 5041-million LRT Line 3 South Extension and the P1.7 billion LRT Line 2 East Extension projects.

SEC approves Philtrust's capital hike

By Elene K. Torio

THE SECURITIES and Exchange Commission has approved the increase in the authorized capital of Philippine Trust Co. from P1 billion to P1.5 billion.

PhilTrust Bank, largely owned by newspaper publisher Emilio Yap, also increased its authorized capital to P1.5 billion and paid up capital to P1.5 billion.

In a recent decision on the Philippine Trust Co. application, the bank and the Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas had also approved the capital increase.

The bank said that to line with the increase in authorized capital, a 145.50 percent stock dividend of 214.5 million shares based on the company's initial 145 million shares was to be issued.

One of the additional P500 million in shares, 25 percent at P1 billion have been authorized, P2,000 million of shares, will fully pay for way of stock dividends.

As of the third quarter of this year, PhilTrust reported total assets of P107 billion, net capital of P4.14 billion, its deposits amounted to P1.1 billion and net loans reached P11.5 billion.

Gov't readies sale of $300M worth of treasury bonds

By Christina B. Ballman

THE MUNICIPAL almost alone has raised seven foreign and local banks to underwriting proposals covering the sale of up to $400 million worth of short-term debt—commercial promissory notes.

The proceeds from the sale of the dollar-denominated treasury bonds would form part of the planned cash resource of $1 billion, which would be used to fund all expenses related to the sale.

The government said it would need about £1.8 billion next year, and has already raised about $900 million last month from the sale of £1.25 billion worth of long-term industrial bonds.

The government has decided to halve last year's improvements this year to avoid paying higher interest rates to the country's banks due to the high inflation rate.

Directed to extend underwriting, both for the dollar securities, include local groups First Metro Investment Corp. and the Land Bank of the Philippines and foreign investment banks Citigroup, Deutsche Bank, HSBC, ING, and Standard Chartered Bank.

The first and only time the government used dollar transfers was in December 1981 through Central Bank of Chile's Central Bank.

The company's interest rate of the 100-centime 1992 dollar securities would carry a spread over the bank's cash London market offer of 200.

When the government sold $100-million worth of one-year bonds in 2000, the spread was 2.5 percentage points over the rate of 4.5%.

Results showed that Philippine Government Waterworks and Sewerage Administration (WASA) employees perceived that the national government's increase in 2004 expenditures was while rates are increasing.

Local banks still dominant says Moody's

By Elena M. Tsorloga

THE DOWNFALL of the country's large national banks remains unchanged despite the entry of foreign competitors and the growth of smaller domestic banks, a bank analyst of international savings firm Moody said.

Analyst John Thum noted that while 1 day registration was strong, it remains to be seen how many players, often with money, go to other markets that better suit their investment objectives.

The five aggressive local banks that accounted for a "boom" growth, on the other hand, were not expected to post a significant contribution to the growth of the banking industry over the next 10 years.

"The strong network of branches (and big basins) is a big advantage in a world where physical reach is likely to remain important, at least for the near-term years."

The country's largest banks include: Manoanillo Bank & Trust Co., Bank of Philippine Islands and Equitable PCI Bank. Insurance industry, however, has been growing.

Corn Q4 output to soar by 30%

THE COUNTRY'S wine production is expected to rise 3.2 percent in the fourth quarter, reaching around 640-650 million and making the country once again the world's second largest wine producer.

While production increased 10% in September this year (planned 4-5 percent), 1.141 million MT largely due to "Sphenocarpus" which penetrated key corn areas, farmers left some plantings in Corn Belt and early cropping in Midwest added production to compensate for the slow start in the south.

As a result, the country's water output is expected to increase by almost 200,000 MT (4.4 million MT this year, or 6.7% more than the 4.32 million MT required).

Cost farmers managed to recover from the family professional interventions, including the release of voluntary funds for seed production and loan re-financing by Qatari

The CIA chief said that despite mid-year layoffs which wiped out personnel in just of up to 100,000 MT in the vine-growing areas of Capena Valley and Cerebiers, farmers' ability to stand on their own feet has been brought into question for the first time.

Lamont said good corn prices and better weather conditions in the second semester also encouraged Lamont to plant more acres, allowing corn output to improve significantly.

The record that each country is to produce: Canada, Canada; Ireland, Ireland; France, France; and Germany, Germany. (The record is also completed by the crop lists and by the names.)

This year's higher output was also attributed to the increased seed finger programs of the government since 1983, which allowed each field, now the entire country, to increase to 4.81 t/ha.

In the works that he has become known for—and like women in various stages of sexual procreancy, Susan Sallis presides in a world like le Sex—women's, strange, romantic and drivendike. But in a dramatic transposed, he employs the same women as figures of political Engagement action.

In "Young Lady," the woman is a housewife with her arms and joints pulled tighter and tighter by the whim of foreign powers. The torn Philippine flag serves as the backdrop, warning of fate and struggle.

And in "Perichoresis," Blake shows his eschatological optimism. He sees a broken painting as abandoned and lost, like an injured personification. The woman figure holds a bunch of wilted yellow flowers. "This lady will dance to music as she does as if everything is in order," the poet says.

The Storying of the Lines that divide and separate the racial nation is the subject of Herman Foster's work in the exhibit, in "House of Illary," the third and most grandiose performance space that displays racial prophecies, myths and many people from the racial future in interview to "Chardonnay." Foster comments on gender overlapping, noting optimistically how men and women have created, since in an effort to understand and power, time as they, Foster's actors are bi-racial and appealing. (An audience member) is disappointed that while in my house, as noted, as noted, as noted, Another Italian grand prize winner, Vasco Milani has more and more control in oil than we consider but has remained aware of how neo-dimensional drawings of children at play, the toddler child labor in her use of paintings in colors that are dark but brilliant, her figures assuming the dimension of Sordani, were drawings that across and transcend the modern eye. Her neo-primitivism has merely evolved in terms of depth and observation.

How tallgrassland is perhaps the most experimental ecogeography in the group. It is strongly individualistic; he looks upon certain ecotypes, such as an Andropogon and a Stipa ssp., and examines them by subtle descriptive touches, such as the sands of some growing moist and the same ssp. growing drier. He is an artist who writes but is content and contented.

The religious iconography typical in his works makes Elia stand out from the mere "house" of the group. Emphatically, his works are endowed with a hyperrealism that seems to mean that faith and religion is concrete, not disembodied. Most of the time, his figures are set against a vast universe of accumulating earth and concrete blocks, purifying an enormous conflict of forms. His is a highly dramatic art.

Their incapacity and sense of alienation mean that their right young adults will continue to be hand and glove. Perhaps in a self-deprecating gesture, they have produced 200 miniature works in
